Is your email address one word? If so, use the MailChecker service! Religious, political, cultural, social issues and the like are the farthest things from my mind when I launch my Firestorm window. I've played several MMO's in the last 6 or 7 years, including the classic EverQuest and the WoW-clone, Anarchy Online. So when it came to the very modern WoW, what caught my eye right away was the differences in graphics, gameplay, market and guild cultures. It's a game that requires a lot of gear, requires the player to plan ahead and use his or her brain in addition to physical strength. "WoW has as much in common with chess as with the game of war," [1] says Linden Lab's Chris Sullen. Of course, they're working together. Some of us even meet in person. "I think about playing MMOs like Chess," said Linden Lab's Elizabeth Stark at the opening of the company's first ever New York City news conference [2]. "Some people think of MMOs like 'I want to go kill things'," added Linden Lab's Eric Ryan. "You can think about MMOs like Chess. The game board is a shared space that everyone can interact with. You can think about where things are, and where you want to be, and where everyone else is. That's what we're trying to do in a virtual space." [1] Linden Lab's Chris Sullen in an interview with MMOGames [2] As reported in "L-Space" magazine #4 (January 2008) The Amazons ZG (Zabbix-Glassfish)
