Amazon. Free .Behavioral risk factor survey of children 8 years of age in five moderate-income neighborhoods in Chicago, Illinois. There is evidence that children's physical activity levels are lower than previous studies have found. The purpose of this paper is to determine whether or not this same pattern exists in an unselected sample of school-age children. A stratified sample of 119 children from the eight schools of five moderate-income neighborhoods was randomly selected. Twenty-one physical risk factors were studied. Significantly fewer children 8 years of age were found to have poor physical fitness, muscle strength, and agility and to have higher rates of cardiore
